

EARLY CAREER SCHOLARS '24

CALL FOR APPLICATIONS

The Center for Research on College-Workforce Transitions (CCWT) at University of Wisconsin-Madison is seeking applications for the second cohort of the Early Career Scholars Program. The Early Career Scholars (ECS) Program is approximately 12 months long, starting in late January 2024 and ending by January 2025. ECS aims to develop and support the next generation of scholars by promoting leadership skills and providing community to early career faculty members or researchers who have an interest aligned with CCWT's mission:

...to develop research tools, evidence, and educational programs that promote the career development and wellness of students as they seek post-graduate success. In this work we amplify the voices and interests of all students, especially those historically marginalized in higher education, with the ultimate aim to facilitate institutional and societal change.

PROGRAM EXPECTATIONS

1. Attend 5 cohort meetings to receive educational opportunities and develop community with other scholars and CCWT team members

2. Share expertise through web/seminar utilizing support from CCWT and UW-Madison to refine your presentation skills and your content

PROGRAM BENEFITS

1. $1,500 stipend

to support scholarship and professional development

2. Public recognition

through the Early Career Scholars page on CCWT's website

3. Educational sessions to develop leadership and administrative skills

4. Staff marketing & coordination support for events branded or co-branded with CCWT

5. Access to CCWT resources
